Another tip is to focus on the eye closest to the camera, as that's the eye we humans would naturally focus on in real life. Focus on the eye that's closer to the camera. Of course, this all goes out the window when photographing groups. In those cases, you'll need a greater depth of field (f/8 to f/10). Where to Focus for Portrait Photography F/4 is a go-to aperture for portraits as it should provide enough depth of field to have all of your subject in focus. To change the aperture on your camera ensure you set the shooting mode to Aperture Priority or AV
