Equity Under this thinking, inclusion may be a definite step toward equity—and many grantmakers are embracing it—but even those who feel included may not experience equity. We believe equity is also different from “equality,” in which everyone has the same amount of something (food, medicine, opportunity) despite their existing needs or assets. What the Heck Does ‘Equity’ Mean? Improving health and health care worldwide requires a focus on equity — equity of access, treatments, and outcomes. Health equity is realized when each individual has a fair opportunity to achieve their full health potential. Differences in access, treatment, and outcomes between individuals and across populations that are systemic,
