Plant roots require oxygen in order to function. Plants cannot tolerate extremely wet sites because soil that is completely full of water has no room for air. Poor root growth occurs when soil air/water balance is out of balance. Trees and shrubs may survive under these conditions but will often grow poorly. Trees, Shrubs, and Groundcovers Tolerant of Wet Sites Many deciduous plants flower during the period when they are leafless, as this increases the effectiveness of pollination. The absence of leaves improves wind transmission of pollen for wind-pollinated plants and increases the visibility of the flowers to insects in insect-pollinated plants.
